The Six Laws

There are Six Laws of the Universe by which every human being is bound. These laws define the journey of every individual, and so tell the story that we all yearn to be told, the story that scientists still search for in physics and in the science of the physical universe – the story of the Meaning of Life.

The Six Laws and Manifestation

The Six Laws are those which are responsible for the life that we are living now, and the life that we manifest in the future. If you are looking to change your life for the better, then you will have to acknowledge these Six Laws in order to make those major shifts that will be lasting and bring about peace, love and ultimate happiness.

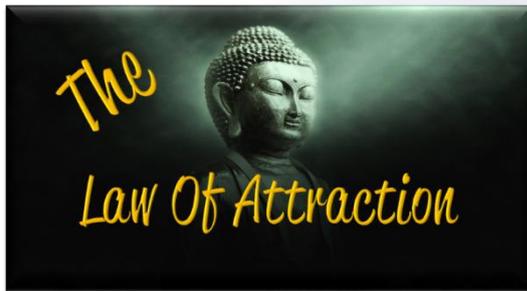

These Six Laws, however, can only be witnessed through observation of your own life. How those Six Laws are playing out in your life is only seen by honest self-enquiry and the willingness to face the truth. And facing these truths is absolutely KEY to changing everything in your life for the better.

Each of these Six Laws play a significant role in the manifestation process, and if any one of them is ignored, you will be much less likely to manifest the life you are seeking. It is important to realize that the Six Laws are PART of you; they do not exist outside of yourself. Looking inward to see them at work, is looking at your own belief mechanisms at work. By ignoring any of the laws (perhaps because you don't like the concept, or that the concept conflicts with something that you believe in) you are in actual fact neglecting parts of yourself that need to be acknowledged and freed.

So if you are keen to change your life and start taking responsibility within your own transformation process, then be ready to embrace all these Six Laws. They are part of you already anyway, and whether you are willing to believe it or not, have ALWAYS been part of you, and have ALWAYS governed your life. Now is simply the time to observe that truth for yourself.

REMEMBER

- DO NOT BELIEVE ANYTHING
- TAKE THE CONCEPTS AND TEST THEM OUT FOR YOURSELF
- KNOW THROUGH DIRECT EXPERIENCE

De-Bunking Some Ideas About This Law

The Law of Attraction is known to many, and very unfortunately has been wrongly touted as THE law responsible for manifestation. It is little wonder then that most people trying to manifest the life that they want find that it mostly does not work in isolation. The Law of Attraction is a vital piece of a SIX piece puzzle and must be worked with in conjunction with all the others. If you have tried and failed to manifest a different lifestyle, a relationship, health or wealth, then you will have first-hand experience of this.

However, when you or someone you know HAS manifested something by focussing only on this law, it is only because BY DEFAULT, all the other laws are in alignment with that which you are trying to manifest. In other words, there is nothing in the way of you manifesting the things that you want. All you had to do was decide what you really wanted and go for it.

But as you, or someone you know, will have discovered, there are desired circumstances that WILL NOT manifest. And this has been frustrating because of the successes you might have had in manifesting other things.

The Law of Attraction Suggests...

The Law of Attraction suggests that you ARE the universe; that is, it does not exist outside of you – instead, it is a mirror of who YOU are. You are vast, vaster than you can imagine. The Law of Attraction suggests that the ‘confinement’ of the ‘subtle’ personality by the human body is just an illusion created by its physical nature. In reality, we are part of the ‘external’ world, meaning... there is NO external world; there is only the universal mind, information from which is processed by the human brain.

You can close your eyes to begin seeing the truth in this. You close your eyes and the body disappears for a moment. You can hear sound, smell aromas. You can see the vastness of space with your eyes closed. You are part of it. It is you. All the sounds you hear are within you. The smells are within you. You just have to experience this with a new filter, forgetting the concept of something happening ‘out there’.

If you think about it, we breathe in the world, and nature breathes US in. Just as we are nourished by the world, so we nourish it. We destroy it too, just as it destroys us. None of us can exist without the other; we are intricately connected in ways that you will slowly discover as you meditate on it.

The Law of Attraction suggests that the world is a mirror of your mind; every person, every situation, every environmental backdrop – all of it reflects what you believe, and therefore how you think. In other words, we can never get away from ourselves because we are walking within our own minds.

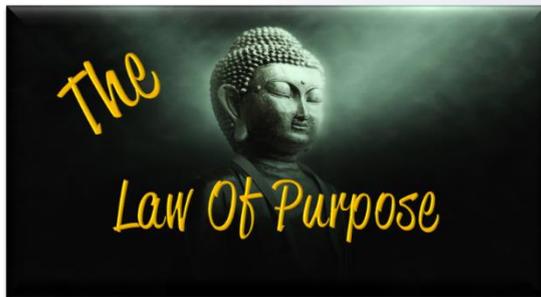

The Law of Attraction suggests that we only ever meet with ourselves on a daily basis. Everything we hear from others, is a voice from within. When someone praises us, or someone criticises us, we are hearing our own inner voices. In other words, when we encounter love or hate from someone else, we are coming face to face with those elements and feelings within ourselves.

The Law of Attraction and Our Beliefs

The Law of Attraction suggests that everything around us reflects what we believe. Every one of us is made up of multiple layers of beliefs that define who we are; our personalities and our relationships, the culture we live within and the countries we are born into. Our beliefs determine how we react to life's events. Our beliefs are responsible for our current levels of happiness, our current state of health and the amount of wealth we experience.

When we are unhappy with our life circumstances, the way to change things is to do something different, make different choices, up-root from the situation and re-plant somewhere else. Changing our beliefs changes our experiences – by identifying and changing the beliefs that tie us to a situation, we get to move out of it. But often we find that our beliefs about life (perhaps cultural, national, social, religious, etc.) and our beliefs about ourselves stop us from making any significant changes. And so, everything stays exactly the same. Worse still, a lot of the time we don't even realize that it is actually some deep belief that governs our decisions. What we experience is a situation in which we are unhappy, and from which we seem unable to move.

The Law of Attraction shows us that what is in front of us points to the beliefs that hold us back from the situations we might prefer to be in. In 'technical' terms, we attract what we believe (IMPORTANT NOTE: We do NOT attract what we think. These are important distinctions discussed here <https://www.lazywisdom-mystic.com/master-courses-sub-menu/>) and we have the opportunity to change our beliefs by looking at our situations and the people in it, to identify and change our beliefs.

The Law of Purpose Suggests...

The Law of Purpose suggests that life is a purposeful experience for every human being; that the world is an isolated place in a vast universe where we are given the opportunity to free ourselves of some very constricting beliefs.

The Law of Purpose suggests that every interaction, in every situation that we find ourselves, is designed to show us who we are. It is designed to allow us to undergo experiences that will eventually lead to us relinquish a set of beliefs that were a part of our personality, and that made us, or other people, unhappy.

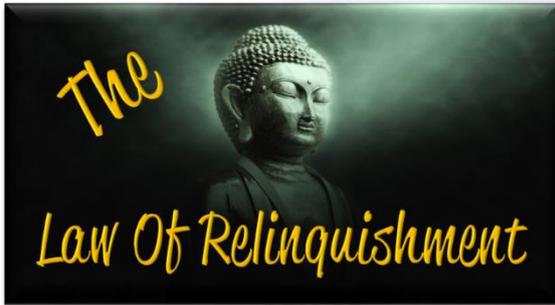

The Law of Purpose suggests that every human being in the world is born with a complex set of beliefs that are deeply ingrained and restrictive. These beliefs are born of many different life experiences throughout the universe and they have brought us different degrees of pain and misery, most of which we now take for granted as 'just life being hard'.

The Law of Purpose suggests that life is not hard, but that our beliefs are. Some people are kind and wonderful, although they harbour beliefs that perhaps make them stay amongst people who abuse them. We might have deep beliefs in our own importance, believing ourselves to be better than others. Other people might be downright socio-pathic and evil, harbouring such deeply ingrained beliefs in their own worthlessness, that they bully, maim or even murder people. The Law of Purpose suggests that our interactions with each other bring us face to face with the beliefs that must be let go if we are to return to a state of grace. Some of us go through terrible experiences in order to for something deep inside to change. Some are the 'perpetrators' for a while, then become 'victims' later on - perhaps in another lifetime. We all serve each other, for the Law of Purpose suggests that we ARE each other.

The Law of Purpose suggests that whoever we are, each of us is not entirely happy. Every one of us wants for something, because we are unhappy at our deepest core. The Law of Purpose suggests that we long for our truest, Godly selves and that in the long game of multiple lifetimes, we are all in the process of returning to that self.

The Law of Purpose suggests that from the time we are born, every experience is designed to strip away the beliefs that make up the human personality, so that we act out of the spiritual self that lies at the core of that personality. Life, then, despite putting us through some of the darkest hells, is designed to make us happy because we are returning 'home' to ourselves, home to the deepest, purest self that is powerful and immeasurable.

The Law of Relinquishment suggests...

The Law of Relinquishment suggests that each one of us is relinquishing different aspects of the personality in our given lifetimes. It does not matter whether we want to change or not. In this life time, we are all destined to evolve.

The Law of Relinquishment is closely tied to the Law of Purpose, in that situations are designed to help you give up some part of yourself. Each of us is evolving at different paces. Some of us will live a relatively quiet life, with very little happening, while others will ride a rollercoaster. There are also those of us who experience something in between. It depends on how we are positioned in relation to each other. We all have an impact on each other's lives, and while some of us will undergo traumatic circumstances, there will be others who have quieter lives, who are destined to support us in some way, or perhaps mirror back something that we need to see (positive or negative). Whatever the pace, we are all moving towards the same goal, and wherever we find ourselves, we all have a role to play in each other's lives.

The Law of Relinquishment suggests that to evolve means that we have to journey through the darkest parts of ourselves. What this means is, because many of us are on a spiritual journey, we have learned what it is to be a 'good' person, and so we strive to act out that goodness. There are a lot of us, however, who are not confronting some aspect of ourselves that is not so kind, loving or giving. We tend to think that to 'be good', we have to suppress certain base instincts that we have.

For example, we've all heard of such stories as a local happily-married Pastor (a great, 'God-fearing up-standing pillar of the community'!) who is discovered to be having affairs within the community! In this example (fiction!), this Pastor was drawn by destiny to the clergy in order to draw out his finer qualities and in the long term, put him in a psychologically stronger position to deal with his darker side (sex addiction, which he had suppressed because of religious guilt). Arriving in this community, he is adored by the female congregation, which triggers this suppressed addiction. This sexual promiscuity covers up some deep fear about life, and the whole scandal that ensues puts him on a road of real introspection. It comes at a time in his life when he is strong enough to confront the darkness and the fears that caused his addiction to sex.

So the Law of Relinquishment is that force of nature that will ensure that we meet with everything that lies buried inside of us. Nothing is 'judged' in a religiously moral sense; it is simply brought to the surface to be confronted, so that we can explore the beliefs that have created our fears and subsequent negative self-esteem. We really and truly never know who we are until we are in certain situations. For instance, we can take long pilgrimages to spiritual places, yet find that we couldn't make the journey because we didn't have the commitment to see it through. Or we can surprise ourselves by completing it, never quite expecting to, because we had low self-esteem at the start. All challenging situations are meant to shake us up, to show us who we really are. We come away changed, with a whole set of beliefs about ourselves having fallen away.

LazyWisdom Mystic
THE SIX LAWS OF THE UNIVERSE

The Law of Relinquishment suggests that the difficulty of the situation that we find ourselves in always matches the strength of the wall of beliefs that needs to come down. Some of us stubbornly hold on to our beliefs. Many of us are terrified to let go because we just don't know how else to be in the world. Most of us don't even realize that we're holding on to anything at all. We just know that we're not happy, or that we're not kind, or that we're too passive or too angry or that we feel imprisoned by the life we are living.

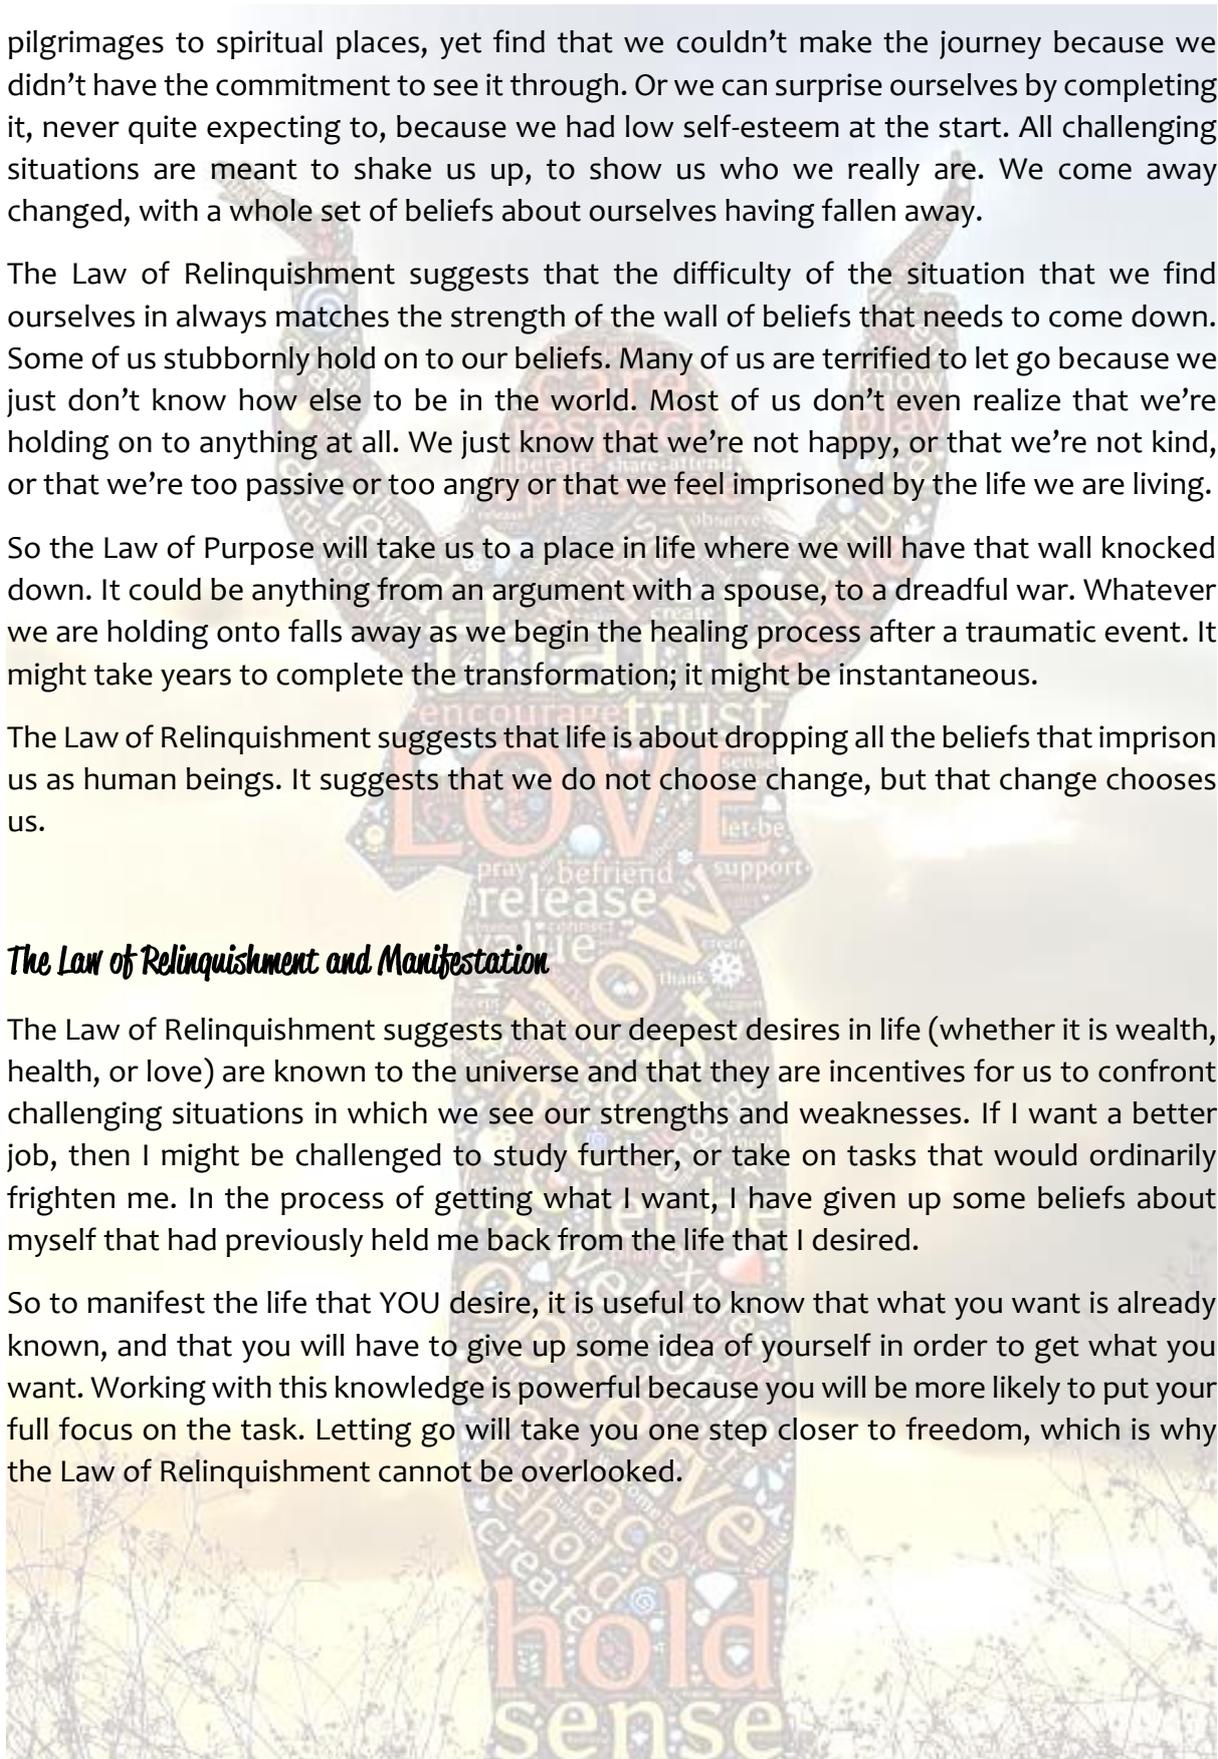

So the Law of Purpose will take us to a place in life where we will have that wall knocked down. It could be anything from an argument with a spouse, to a dreadful war. Whatever we are holding onto falls away as we begin the healing process after a traumatic event. It might take years to complete the transformation; it might be instantaneous.

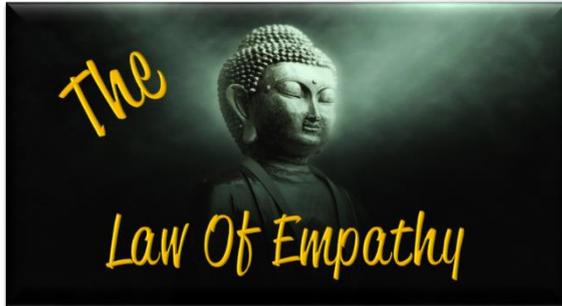

The Law of Relinquishment suggests that life is about dropping all the beliefs that imprison us as human beings. It suggests that we do not choose change, but that change chooses us.

The Law of Relinquishment and Manifestation

The Law of Relinquishment suggests that our deepest desires in life (whether it is wealth, health, or love) are known to the universe and that they are incentives for us to confront challenging situations in which we see our strengths and weaknesses. If I want a better job, then I might be challenged to study further, or take on tasks that would ordinarily frighten me. In the process of getting what I want, I have given up some beliefs about myself that had previously held me back from the life that I desired.

So to manifest the life that YOU desire, it is useful to know that what you want is already known, and that you will have to give up some idea of yourself in order to get what you want. Working with this knowledge is powerful because you will be more likely to put your full focus on the task. Letting go will take you one step closer to freedom, which is why the Law of Relinquishment cannot be overlooked.

The Law of Empathy Suggests...

The Law of Empathy suggests that as human beings we are on a journey of reconnection to each other; it suggests that as our rigid beliefs drop away through the Laws of Purpose and Relinquishment, so we begin to see each other differently, so we start to be gentler with each other. Empathy is feeling what the other feels. In feeling what the other is feeling, we are one with them. When we are one with another, we can't hurt them, because in doing so, we hurt ourselves. The Law of Empathy is about bringing human beings and other beings together in love.

The Law of Empathy suggests that our striving to manifest the life that we desire, and the situations that we encounter that help us to shed our limiting beliefs (some beautiful, some traumatic) all break open the barriers to the heart. As we evolve, we start to feel for other people, and are much more careful with their hearts. We naturally become kinder, gentler and giving, because ultimately we realize that we ARE that other, beyond all genetic links.

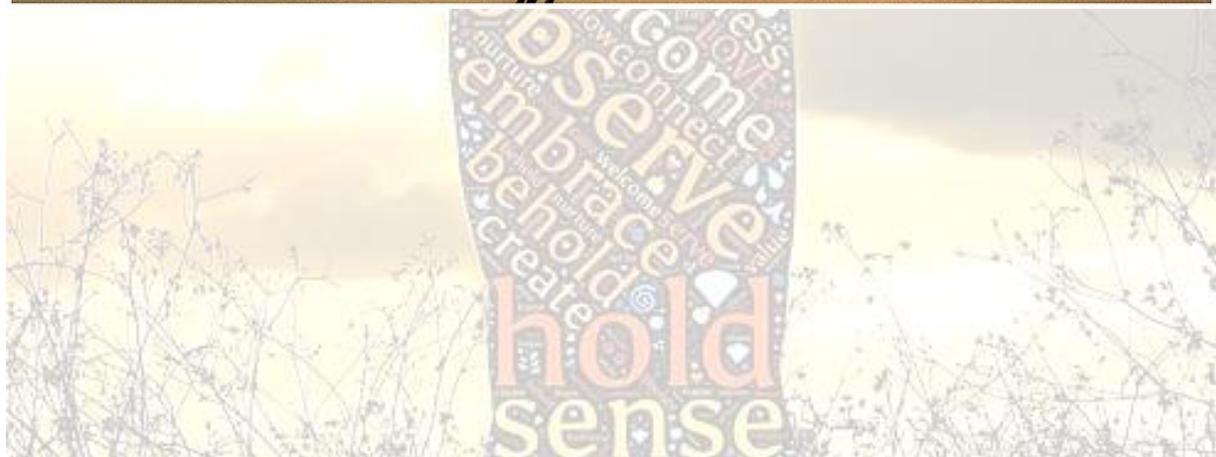

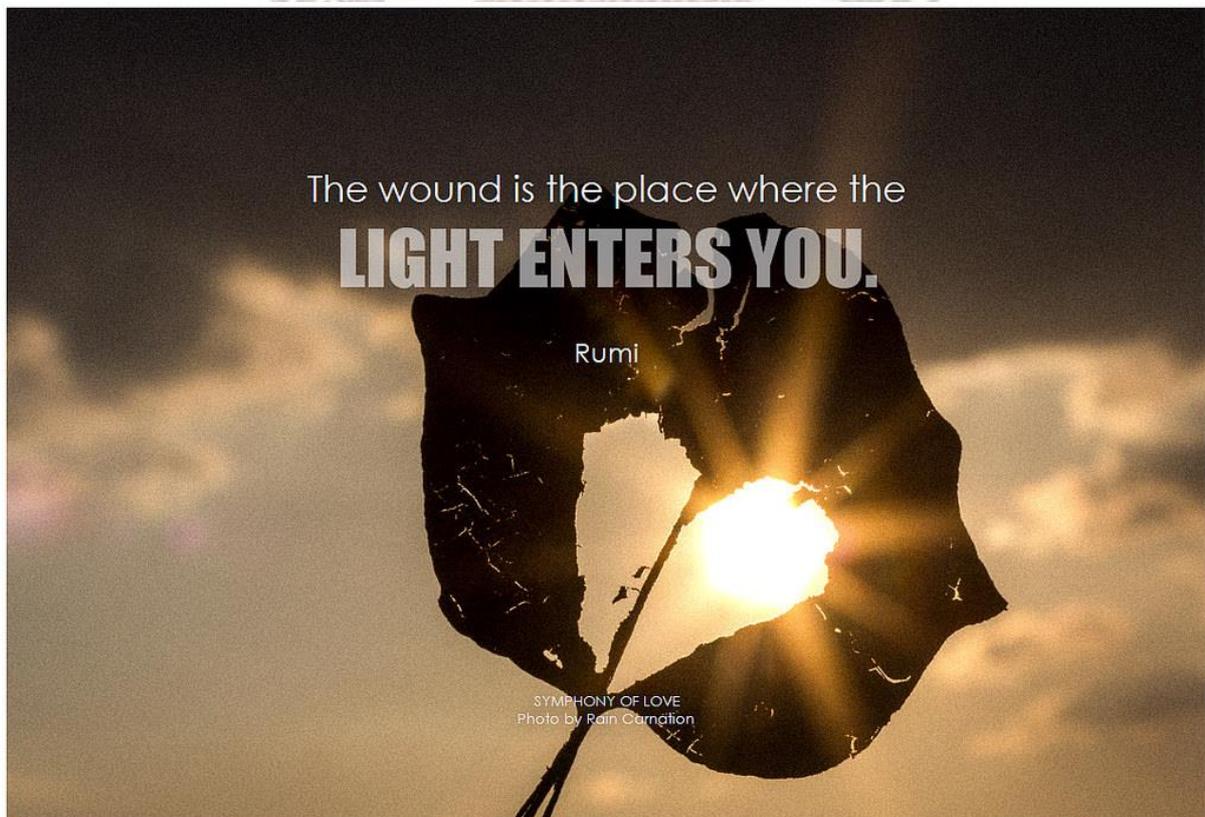

Imagine for a moment that you are the kind of person to drink alcohol and drive while under the influence, on a regular basis. You don't give a thought for the danger that you might put yourself in, or that you could put others in. Your heart has a wall around it that is constructed of beliefs about the world that are cynical. Perhaps you believe that every person should look out for themselves; that it's a dog-eat-dog world and that you'd do better to only look out for yourself. These beliefs affect every other area of your life. They stop you from feeling for others because you are so full of fear for your own survival. So when you go out with friends, and you want a drink, but don't want to get a taxi home, it's easy for you to make the decision to drive in an intoxicated state. Then one day, a close family member gets hit by a drunk driver and dies. Perhaps, being at a certain point in your evolution, the experience brings home to you what you were doing. The pain of grief is so severe that it breaks open your heart. Now you feel for others. Your mind extends beyond your own entertainment, to the feelings of others. Every time you get in your car to go out with friends, you think first how awful it would be to put someone through the pain that you feel. That is empathy. That is reconnection to the other.

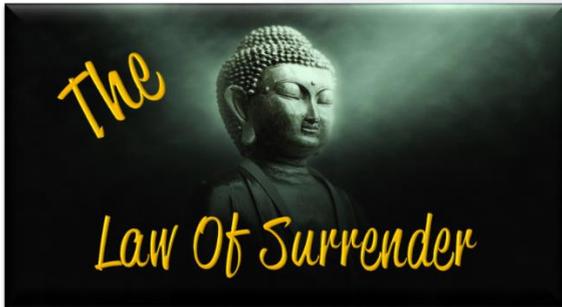

The Law of Empathy suggests that experiences of absolute kindness when we need it most, and absolute trauma when we are unable to feel for others, have profound effects on bringing down the walls (of beliefs about the world and other people) that we've built around our hearts.

The Law of Empathy and Manifestation

The Law of Empathy suggests that as we reconnect with others, so we are reconnecting to the wider universe. As the mental and emotional obstacles between you and others drop away, so you become more understanding and open to others. This extends your scope of experience and enriches your relationships. You begin to manifest more love, deeper affiliations and you feel less emotional upheaval because you understand where others are coming from and take nothing personally. The Law of Empathy helps you manifest lasting love and peace in your life.

The Law of Surrender Suggests...

The Law of Surrender suggests that you are not alone on this journey, and that everything you desire is known to the universe.

This might be a difficult concept for you to feel and understand because of the deep conditioning of ingrained beliefs, yet if you focussed your mind on it, and meditated deeply on the events of your life, you'd find the truth in it.

The Law of Surrender suggests that there is nothing for you to do but be cognisant of the fact that everything is being taken care of. This means that when you have a deep desire for something – perhaps you really want to have a wonderful relationship with someone, or you really would like a specific position in your company, or your health needs to improve drastically – then you should trust that the universe already knows this and is working on it on your behalf.

If you haven't already achieved your dreams, then you are certainly on the road to them. It might be a short journey, or it might be a long one. It all depends whether or not your current beliefs are in alignment with what you are seeking. To achieve a wonderful relationship, you might need to change your own outlooks on life, and this might take some work to do. Or your health issues may have something to do with the beliefs you have about life itself - for example if you are easily stressed, you might develop over time some stress-related diseases that will only go away when you change your perspectives of the world. Again, this could take time and a lot of experiences before this happened.

The Law of Surrender suggests that the deepest desires of our hearts are those we have always been striving for, sometimes without even realizing it. You might, for example, have been born into quite a poor family, and as a result did not have the opportunities that you would have liked to be privy to. This could have triggered the need to improve the quality of your life, so you therefore had a drive to study, a drive to work hard and a drive to get the best out of life that you could.

The point is, the universe (which is part of you) already knows this. The Law of Surrender suggests that the universe put you in the situation of poverty to begin with, because you had something to gain from it. Perhaps you needed to develop the impulse to move your energy - perhaps in a different life you were lethargic and frightened of life. The poverty, then, plays an important role in the dropping of ingrained beliefs. Similarly, when you start to put your mind towards a certain job, those 'opportunity roads' are already there, although the job itself might not be in sight yet. Perhaps you have too many fearful beliefs in the way of that new job, and so the circumstances of your life (the Law of Purpose) are brought about to challenge you in a way that allows those beliefs to drop away (the Law of Relinquishment).

The Law of Surrender suggests that every impulse you feel to do something – for example, seeing that job you want and applying to different companies, or seeing a training course on offer to develop you, and signing up even though you have little money - comes from universal sources. After all, where IS your mind actually located? The Law of Surrender suggests that the brain is nothing more than an information processor of intelligence that originates from the universe. The mind, therefore IS the universe, although the brain only processes the kind of information we need for our personal destiny.

The Law of Surrender and Manifestation

When you finally understand the fact that you and the universe are NOT separate and are in fact the SAME ENTITY, then surrender occurs naturally. We can't force ourselves to surrender, because our beliefs in our own sense of control is too strong. Surrender happens because we see the truth, and this only occurs when we look back on our lives and do some real exploration.

When we are in a surrendered state, and begin to feel the subtle impulses of the universe flowing through us, we stop getting in the way of the flow of the river of life. In this way, manifestation becomes easier and quicker because we are meeting our challenges with grace, with determination and with courage. We understand that every situation is there to teach us something, to facilitate a dropping of beliefs so that we can take one step closer to our desired manifestation. Surrender is vitally important to the manifestation process because it brings power, unity and peace.

The Law of Inevitability Suggests...

The Law of Inevitability suggests that everything that your heart truly desires is known, it is destined and it WILL be made manifest. Sometimes it will be a journey of a lifetime, or two or three lifetimes. Sometimes it will be relatively immediate. It all depends on who you are and what it is you want manifest. Remember that our deepest desires are a motivating force that help us to drop old, limiting beliefs, and the length of time it takes to manifest depends on how willing we are to drop them.

The Law of Inevitability reminds you that all of life is purposeful, and is designed to bring you back to a state of peace and love. Peace, love and unity with all is the LONG game of life, and it is the only ultimate end.

Here and now, however, we are human beings wrapped up in layers of sometimes quite fearful beliefs that prevent us from really being supremely happy. We think we are alone in the universe, responsible for our own lives (a deep frozen fear that we are often not in touch with), we fear for our survival on a daily basis, we worry that others will take something away from us. We fear disaster of different varieties (why else do we insure our cars, houses, lives, possessions?) We fear rejection and total abandonment. We fear death and destruction. When you think about how these deep, deep fears govern our every move, is it any wonder we manifest the lives that we do?

We are always seeking happiness, but we tend to seek it in material things, because we don't know how else to feel good. And so the universe leads us on a search of material happiness because in this moment, that is what motivates us. There's nothing wrong with it. It's simply where we are right now. In our search for better relationships, health and wealth we find ourselves motivated to free ourselves of old beliefs and that can only be a good thing. A time will come when the need for materiality will drop away and make way for something more profound. And the universe already knows that. And the road is all mapped out for us. We don't have to do a thing.
